BACKGROUND:

“In British Columbia, the right to harvest Crown timber is conferred through the form of agreements under the Forest Act. The Forest Act and the agreements require licensees to carry out waste assessments. Waste assessments are carried out to quantify the volumes of merchantable timber and waste left on the harvested areas following the completion of primary logging. The waste volume data compiled from the assessments are used to invoice licensees for monetary and cut control charges.”

Government of British Columbia, Provincial Logging Residue and Waste Measurements Procedure Manual, 2017
